VICTORY LOAN SIDELIGHTS

Perhaps a good many small investors who are figuring on a $50 or $100 bond would be interested in knowing how they can buy.

The government is making very easy terms.

On a $50 bond the payments would be as follows:

$5.00 or 10 percent with application

$5.00 or 10 percent July 15.

$10.00 or 20 percent August 15.

$10.00 or 20 percent September 9.

$10.00 or 20 percent October 7.

$10.00 or 20 percent November 11.

You see you will have over six months in which to pay for your bond.

Payment in full can be completed on any of the installment dates.

How could it be made easier? Your first stiff payment doesn't come until August 15, and you have until November 11 to complete the purchase.

No young man or woman who is working, and doesn't have substantial obligations at home, should be without one or more of the smaller bonds.

This bond is very attractive to the young people as it matures in four years.

Many a man or woman throws away the cost of a small bond in six months time.

Now by careful saving they can get a splendid investment and at the same time enjoy a real service for their country.

If one should need more time, no doubt arrangements can be made to carry the debt along, even beyond the six months period.

Some people say, "Well, the other bonds are selling below par and the people are losing money on them.

No one need lose any money. He need but keep his bond.

Many people when they bought the other loan, deliberately threw their bonds on the market, thinking that they had performed their duty in buying the loan.

Some were forced to sell because of unforeseen emergencies. No matter what the reason for a private sale might have been, the bonds were forced onto a market that had already been glutted.

You know in those enormous sales it was necessary to reach everybody for all he could buy, and consequently the subsequent sellers found everybody loaded up with the article they were offering for sale.

But isn't it reasonable to suppose that after the close of the war, when no more bonds are being publicly offered, that the market will pick up?

Don't you think the conservative investor will soon be looking for these good securities, and even bidding for them at a premium?

The history of all War Financing proves that these bonds are bound to sell at a good premium a little later on.

Don't sell at a loss, and above all things, don't let some shark trade you out of your bonds for some blue sky stocks.

If you want to sell them for good property all well and good, but look out for the fellow who wants to sell you some stock and take your liberty bonds—see your lawyer or banker first.

Remember this is the last loan.

COMPLAINT AGAINST LUMBER CO. FILED IN CIRCUIT COURT

The complaint of J. P. Cullen vs. the Straits Lumber Co., and its directors, asking for an accounting and a cancellation of stock, was officially filed today in circuit court, by S. D. Halliday, attorney for the plaintiff. It is a lengthy document made up of 55 folios.

The defendants are listed as follows: Straits Lumber Co., J. S. Fifield, George King, F. B. Farnsworth, H. S. Gilkey and Frank R. Pendleton, both of Minneapolis, A. W. Howard and T. M. Simmons, both of Chicago, and H. N. Hosick.

The most important allegations in the complaint are:

That the Straits Lumber Co. is a Wisconsin corporation and its directors are its officers and directors, except H. N. Hosick.

That it issued $11,018,300 worth of stock.

That this corporation was formed for the purpose of acquiring timber lands in British Columbia, Canada.

That the three timber tracts were purchased by the defendants for the sum of $327,647, and about $175,000 was spent in building railroads and other improvements upon the properties.

That the company purchased a sawmill which was operated for two years.

That there is a bonded indebtedness upon the property for $200,000.

That a majority of the stockholders only have stock for the amount of money they paid into the company while the defendants and a few others hold a majority of the stock.

That certain of the defendants in pursuance of a fraudulent design and agreement conspired to defraud the defendant company for their own gain, by issuing to themselves large amounts of stock of the Straits Lumber Co., for which they never paid.

The action is for the purpose of cancelling such stock; for an accounting of the monies which came into their possession; and to enjoin the defendant from forming a company in Canada and transferring the assets of this company to the Canadian company; and for the appointment of a receiver.

The complaint is the result of hearings which were held before Circuit Court Commissioner M. P. Richardson several months ago, and at which time, Jeffrey Mouat, Ostrich and others were the attorneys for the defendants and E. D. Tallman and Charles E. Pierce for the plaintiff.

In addition to the two plaintiff's attorneys, Volney E. Simmons and Mortimer J. Walker, both of Racine, have also been retained to appear for Mr. Cullen.

Secretary Daniels Has First Glimpse of Marines

(By Associated Press.) Coblenz, April 18.—From a parapet of the fortress Ehrenbreitstein, more than 400 feet above the junction of the Moselle and Rhine, Secretary Daniels had his first glimpse this afternoon of American marines in the Atlantic boats were darting back and forth among the barges and tugs on the river, the American flag streaming from the stern mast of each little boat.

At a point where the Moselle joins the Rhine stands a heroic statue of Emperor William First, said to be the largest of its kind in Germany. Beyond the statue there are great piles of lumber which are being used by the American soldiers of the army of occupation.

Believe Croak Auto Found at Oconomowoc

Following receipt of a telephone message yesterday afternoon from Oconomowoc, that an automobile answering description of the one stolen here Wednesday night from the residence of Walter Croak, 1904 Mineral Point avenue, Mr. Croak and Chief of Police William E. Gower this morning left for Oconomowoc to see the machine. Word was that the car had been found and had been badly damaged by the thieves.

CAMP CHAPLAIN SPEAKS AT BAPTIST HOLY WEEK SERVICE

As part of the special Passion Week exercises of the Baptist church, a group of people were baptized last evening and taken into the fellowship of the organization. They were Mrs. W. H. Shoemaker, Mrs. L. Joerg, Miss Mayhew, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Barker and Mr. and Mrs. Liddy.

Charles Whann, Camp Grant, preached the sermon. He gave a vivid word picture of the events taking place in that upper room during the last scenes in the life of Christ. Of what must have been his thought as he looked about upon the disciples, and discerned the jealousy and selfishness with which their minds were filled.

He said: "The great transactions which were taking place before their eyes. They had lived with him for a matter of two years, had gone up and down the land with him, and yet could not measure up to his ideals."

He showed that they were looking for a material kingdom where Jesus should be crowned king, instead of the crown of thorns and the cross which he knew were to be his portion.

The thought was emphasized that people should not criticize the membership of the church of today for their shortcomings, when the disciples to whom had been given the privilege of living with Christ, were far from perfect.

"As Jesus looked at his apostles on this occasion," said Chaplain Whann, "he needed help and comfort, but he found that they were weak and failed him. But he was not discouraged, he realized that they were human, and must still take his message to a waiting world. He put new help and comfort into their lives, as he does into all who daily labor and saw the good in human nature, which he does today."

"The beautiful act of service which Christ performed at this time," he stated, "was typical of the love and humility of the master toward his people. Jesus by this service revealed to them the fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of man, and the essence of his gospel, which is unselfish love."

The question of entering life through suffering, as instanced by the lessons taught by the great war, were dealt upon, and the thought brought out that greater things were coming to the world, through the Gethsemane suffering through which it had passed.

A chorus choir directed by Mrs. Thomas sang many old familiar hymns. He also sang a solo. The choir consisted of a class of young people who will be given Sunday also.

FRESHMEN GIRLS WILL HOLD SALE SATURDAY

Janesville mothers will have the opportunity Saturday, April 19, to take of the food and supplies prepared by the Freshman Domestic Science classes of the local high school. The Freshman girls of three Domestic Science classes are preparing an attractive array of cakes, cookies, doughnuts, pies, etc., which they will offer at remarkably low prices.

The sale will be held in Kimball's Furniture store all day Saturday. No attempt at profit will be made and the goods sold as cheap as possible as the sale is simply intended to show the mothers the work of the Domestic Science classes. It is expected that the girls will be well patronized, as the sale is the first of its kind given in some time.

TOMORROW LAST DAY FOR HOUSING BIDS

The contract for building the first 50 houses for the Janesville Housing corporation may be let tomorrow, so that work may begin at once.

All bids must be in the hands of Backus & Fuller by 10 o'clock tomorrow evening in order to receive consideration.

Practically every local contractor has submitted an estimate. Bids have also been received from several contractors in other cities.

Parents Will Settle for Missing Cement Sacks

Parents of three third ward boys will settle tomorrow with Hilton and Sadler, contractors, for a large number of cement sacks stolen from a new building on Rugeley street.

The Field Lumber company admits purchasing thirteen of the sacks, the police say, but there is some question where the remainder of the sixty-six claimed to have been stolen went.

Ed. Griffin to Face Judge Maxfield Tomorrow

CHARGES CITY LAX IN INSPECTION OF ELECTRICAL WORK

Editors Note: The following communication addressed to the Citizens of Janesville, was given to the Gazette Wednesday night for the Voice of the People Column:

"The information of the citizens of Janesville I wish to state the conditions under which electrical work has been done in the city.

"There has been no inspection of electrical wiring and consequently the wiring installed has been very unsafe and in many respects far from the rules of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, which invites a great danger to life and property through the possibilities of fire.

"The local contractors have taken advantage of this oversight of our city officials in not having this inspection of these boys recently had to attend and have been employing many young boys to install electrical wiring. Some school a number of hours per week because of their age."

"At the Adams school within the last year a fire was started through electrical equipment not properly installed. This is one of the many illustrations which will show the possibilities of fire through improperly installed electrical wiring. Fortunately the fire department arrived at the scene and prevented what might have been a serious disaster and loss of life."

"In Chicago some years ago the electrical equipment set out to the thousands of living which caused a great loss of life."

"Now the plumbing is inspected, why not the electrical wiring? Is it not time that something be done to forestall this situation? I would like to have expressed through the columns of this paper the opinions of other citizens in regard to this matter."

A. VOTER.

In view of the present agitation between the electrical union and the electrical contractors here, the Gazette seemed it wise to investigate the matter.

That there has been no inspection of late electrical installation was found on all sides to be correct. Since Henry C. Klein was removed from the office of chief of the fire department and city electrician the city has had no inspector to carry on the work.

Mayor Thomas E. Welsh was shown the communication yesterday and promised speedy action on the appointment of an expert to safeguard life and property.

From the electrical contractors came the admission that boys attended the industrial school were employed part time by them, but that any work they were on was always under the supervision of a competent foreman.

Inquiry at the fire department substantiated the statement that the Adams school blaze was originated from electrical wiring. A short circuit caused by crossed wires was responsible.

Says He Wasn't Drunk; Held for Examination

Dennis Gray, fined lightly in Municipal court several days ago for drunkenness, visited Judge Maxfield again today on similar charges. He refused to plead guilty this time and demanded examination. It was set for tomorrow morning.

C. P. Culvin, a salesman from Chicago, was fined ten dollars and costs and paid it for being intoxicated.

Officers of the organization would make no statement today in regard to the inquiry. A public statement of the milk producers' status will be drawn up at the directors' meeting tonight.

News Notes from Movieland

By DAISY DEAN

Something "new under the sun" is going to take place in filmland. A pretentious company of living players are to accompany a feature picture in its tour of this country and Canada. This is positively the first time in the history of modern picture enterprises that such an undertaking has been attempted.

But that is not all of the story. When the tour is started there is going to be a great rejoicing throughout the country and great sorrowing on the California beaches. The reason for all the joy and gloom is the fact that the picture is Matt Sennett's "Yankee Doodle in Berlin" and the players who are to accompany it on its tour are none other than the famous Sennett bathing girls.

Can't you just imagine how wild the wild waves will be when these beach beauties leave the coast? Sol Lesser, who has the rights for distribution of the picture, conceived the idea and he promises that with each print of the picture will travel a select group of Mack Sennett girls. This is our very latest picture of Phyllis Haver and when we think that she is only one of the many California sea-nymphs that we may see in the near future we get all excited. We do hope that Phyllis and the rest of the girls show us some of their newest bathing costumes if they come to town.

DO YOU BELIEVE IT?

One of the features of "Playthings of Passion," in which Kitty Gordon is starring is a hula-hula dance. In a ballroom scene some 500 people are said to appear.

Another specialty feature is the barefoot dancer, Mochie, who was brought from New York to Los Angeles to appear in just two scenes in "Playthings and Passion." She arrived in the afternoon, appeared in her specialty and later boarded an eastbound train, having spent just three hours in Los Angeles.

To travel 3,000 miles for two scenes is "going some," say we.

FRANCIS HOME IN CATALINA
Francis Ford, while at Catalina Island recently, bought a home on the island, and will spend his week-ends at Catalina for the next twenty weeks that he is engaged on his new serial, the opening episode of which takes place on an island of the Mexican coast. Director Ford's general manager, Harry Ellis Dean, is also negotiating the purchase of a home on the island to be used in conveying guests to and from Catalina. It looks as if there will be many a jolly week-end party given at the Ford summer home.

Kitty Gordon

HIGH SCHOOL CLASS TEAMS PRACTICING FOR COMING GAMES

Baseball practice is being held daily by the class teams of the high school. All four classes have taken an unusual interest in the sport and large numbers of candidates are reporting nightly. The junior nine headed by Ted Hager, of All Star fame, looks to be fairly strong and will doubtless make a strong bid for championship honors. Crowley is behind the bat and make an ideal battery mate for Hager.

The seniors have a strong array of talent out. Sprackling is pitching to and he sure has some speed. Nuzum will doubtless hold down the catcher's job. Alton, Roy, Dugan and Clark have all clinched berths, so that the seniors look strong.

The freshmen and sophomore teams are as yet unknown. Reports coming from the campus state that several crack players have been found in their midst.

Kenosha.—Miss Laura Hahn, recently appointed probation officer by Judge Tully, after taking the vow to conduct her business of watching Kenosha's moral welfare for the best interests of the community at large, was presented with a gold badge which will be her seal of office. The badge was presented to Miss Hahn by Judge J. T. Tulkey, and is of unique design. It has a small gold star surrounded by a shield with the words "Probation Officer, Kenosha, Wis." around the border.

A WOMAN'S BUSINESS

THE VERDICT.

The instant the couple in front of them left the car, Walt turned to Janet with shining eyes.

"Did you hear what she said?" he demanded eagerly. "I'll make a bet she's a Rosalie in real life. I think—I think—!" He hesitated before expressing too hopeful a thought. Janet gladly finished it for him.

"Yes, I heard and I saw—and I know," she whispered, pressing up close to him. "You have made her see herself as she is! You have made her think! You have affected her! Oh, Walt, how wonderful!"

Walt, head back, a deep, wistful sigh escaping him.

"Janet, if I thought I could do that for people I would not care what else I succeeded in," he said softly. "But we'll see what the critics say to-morrow morning."

That night neither of them slept soundly. At dawn Walt arose, dressed and bought copies of every morning paper. When he returned, Janet was up.

She heard him go out and knew why. When he came in, her eyes layed to his for the first intimation of the verdict.

"Pretty good!" he said, knowing what she was waiting to hear. "The critics are pretty nice to me—on the whole."

Janet's hands shook a little as she rushed through the criticisms of Walt's play. It seemed to her that critics must be the cold-blooded tribe on earth. "Teach us a needed lesson powerfully," "The public is better off for this play," were typical comments. Not one supple, not one expression of unreserved enthusiasm. Janet's heart sank. She felt the play had been damned with faint praise.

But Rowe summed it up later in the day.

"The critics are undecided whether it's going to go or not; they're side-stepping. We'll have to ask the box office next."

The play drew only moderately well the first week and the second; a little better the next three weeks. Then Rowe said:

"I think the wise move is to transfer it to my smaller theater. This house is too big for the play."

Walt nodded assent. He had been drawing comfort from the thought of his play's success on the night of the opening.

"I guess you're right, Rowe," he said. "It's not a howling success. But that couple I saw—they were the world and his wife! And if they could be touched—"

"Please, Mr. Rowe. If it is not too much of a sacrifice, let the play stay on at the theater for another week or two," Rowe entreated. "I have a feeling it will begin to pull from now on!"

Rowe smiled pleasantly.

"Well, I don't see why your feeling about the play isn't as good as mine," he said. "I am all at sea! So, we'll let her stay on a bit longer!"

The first half of the next week did not differ from the other weeks. But the latter half showed an increase of attendance. The next week exceeded any previous week; the week after that the whole theater was filled at every performance.

"It has caught on!" Rowe cried gaily, coming on the Steadmans at supper in their home. "House is selling out weeks ahead! It's the surest kind of success! The kind that works up slowly and then strikes! It's been a case of educating the people a bit. Word-of-mouth reputation is what it's won—better than thousands of dollars of advertisement. Steadman, what will you take to act as my private prophet?"

Janet grasped both his hands in joy. Then she turned and kissed Walt.

"I'd rather you engage Walt to give you occasion for prophecies with more plays!" she said gaily but earnestly.

Whereas Rowe took out a prepared contract from his pocket and waved it before Walt.

"I had that thought before you, Mrs. Steadman," he cried. "Sign here, Walter Steadman!"

SPORTS COSTUMES CONTINUE POPULAR

By ELOISE.

Let no one doubt that the sweater has lost any of its popularity. Judging from the vast assortment being displayed at this moment it is practically safe to say this will be a sweater season. After all, no one garment or wrap takes the place of this comfortable and good-looking little thing. The sweater fills a thousand needs and purposes and incidentally can make the most impossible waist skirt and blouse have a semblance, at least, of perfect up to date.

While there is no distinct departure from the designs of other seasons the sweater has been given a new twist with the endless new colors and the combinations of colors now so cleverly exploited. For instance, a marvellous shade of French blue wool is used in this attractive model with its long stole collar and broad belt. The skirt of kumala silk woven in large squares is white. The smart hat with clipped brim and the long drooping trimmed sailor shape with an odd shaped crown. It is blue straw braided lid a darker shade of blue.

If fashion continues to create such beautiful sport clothes they will never go out of style for the American girl, regardless of what her sisters across the ocean say about them.

FOR THE TABLE.

Cheese Sauce.—One cup milk, two tablespoons flour, one-quarter cup grated cheese, salt and pepper. Thicken the milk with the flour mixed with cold water to make a paste. Just before serving add the cheese, stirring until it is melted. This sauce is suitable to use in preparing creamed eggs, or to pour over toast, making a dish corresponding to creamed toast. It may be seasoned with a little curry powder and poured over hard-cooked eggs. By using one-half cup of cheese instead of one-quarter cup of sauce it is suitable to use with macaroni or rice. By increasing the amount of cheese to two cups the sauce may be served on toast as a substitute for Welsh rarebit.

Spaghetti Piquante.—Two teaspoons browned flour, two teaspoons butter or substitute, blended together. Add gradually two cups beef stock; cook until smooth. Add four cups tomatoes catsup, six drops tabasco sauce, one teaspoon kitchen bouquet, one-half teaspoon salt, few grains paprika. Add two cups boiled spaghetti, mix and turn into an oiled baking dish. Sprinkle crumbs and grated cheese over the top and bake until brown.

Apple and Watercress Salad.—Choose a snappy bunch of watercress and separate well, allowing the sprigs to rinse and chill in ice water for some time. Look out for insects and small snail life that are apt to lurk among the leaves, and trim away tiny roots and faded or yellow leaves. Remove from the ice water and shake as free as possible and dress with a French salad mixture of four tablespoons of high grade olive oil to one of cider vinegar, half teaspoon of salt and one-half as much as that of paprika or cayenne. Toss thoroughly and fill a handsome salad bowl, pressing away from the center to make a place for strips which have been peeled. Arrange these in a heap and dash the remainder of the dressing

A Fashion I Approve Of.

There is a certain tendency in the styles of today which has my most enthusiastic approval (what a comfort that must be to Dame Fashion!) I refer to the widespread use of colorful head chains and also of many hued scarfs as a decorative feature in woman's dress.

I gave the Effect of Three Gowns. In a certain restaurant which I occasionally frequent I have several times seen a young woman whom I should say probably belonged to the upper ranks of business women. Each time I have seen her she has had on the same gown—a black satin gown of rich material made very simply but on excellent lines. And each time the gown has looked different because of kamiks or lack thereof. The first time I saw her was in the evening, she was dining with a young man apparently as a preliminary to some kind of evening entertainment. On this occasion her black gown was the background for a beautiful (but not necessarily expensive) chain fashioned of coral colored and jet beads. It hung half way to her waist, and when she moved it gave a lovely contrast to the note of coral was repeated in her stockings.

The next time I noticed her was on a Sunday morning. I should say she had a handsome fur coat and the gown was worn without ornaments of any sort. So different did this make it appear that I looked twice to be sure it was the same gown.

THIS TIME IT WAS A SYMPHONY OF BLUE AND BLACK.

The third time she appeared, she wore a long chain in which small black beads were punctuated at rhythmic intervals by large beads of that bright blue which in contrast with black is so popular just now. Tiny blue ear rings and stockings to match completed a costume, French in good taste and extremely becoming.

Again I met some years ago a woman who always gave the impression of being dressed richly and with distinction. Later I knew her quite intimately and on a closer acquaintance with her wardrobe I found it consisted of a few simple good things, which she knew how to cleverly enhance and vary by the use of several rich scarfs in odd and most becoming shades. These she always kept on hand, renewing them as fast as they wear out.

Be On the Outlook for Such Aids to Beauty of Gowning.

That was some years ago before scarfs were as popular as they are now. Today, not only have plans of such scarfs to be behind the styles as well as neglectful of a great aid to one's wardrobe.

Every daughter of Eve instinctively loves beautiful things to wear. Some of us, however, do not feel that we can afford to sacrifice the large proportion of our income which maintaining a wardrobe of beautiful and well furnished wardrobes would eat up. But we can at least be on the outlook for all such comparative inexpensive aids to beauty of gowning as these I have mentioned.

Color and lines are what makes clothes beautiful and distinctive—not what they cost.

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please tell me how to make my husband less jealous of me?

He won't take me any place and won't let me have any of my friends come to our home. I have always been true to him and keep his house clean. Please tell me what to do.

MRS. G.

A wife has her rights just as well as her husband has his. It is not a bit unreasonable for you to want to entertain your friends, and therefore I think you should do so without consulting your husband. Entertain during the day and tell him quietly but firmly you intend to continue doing so.

The way to a man's heart nowadays seems to be through attractive clothing. Look your best and your husband will want to take you places.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 20 years old. Last June I was engaged to a young man three years my senior. I love him dearly. We were to be married the Fourth of July, but he had to leave for France.

I should I keep our engagement? I have only heard from him once since he has gone across. Have I done right by writing him a letter every week or every other week?

For should I accept him when he comes home? We are expecting him soon for he wrote to his sister saying they will soon leave France.

HOPEFUL.

Wait and see how the young man treats you when he comes back. If he shows indifference talk the matter over and release him from the engagement if he finds he does not love you as he used to. If you are together when he returns and you are together again he will care as much of you as ever.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Several weeks ago I was going with a young man who took me several places. I was taken sick with the influenza and I did not hear from him. I have been well for two weeks, but I have not heard from him. Jo Jo you think it would be all right if I write him a note and ask him to come to see me?

W. J.

I would not write him a note if I were you. Wait until he sees you and he will probably ask to call again.

In reply to "Heartstuck": Have your father or brother get in touch with an officer in the probation court. If he makes the request to keep you, it will be granted under the circumstances.

I would suggest for the trip a street dress and one for afternoon or evening wear (a silk or georgette would be suitable for the latter), and a tall crepe coat and hat. A suit would be convenient, but not entirely necessary.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two young girls who have attracted the attention of two handsome young men. We have talked to them often and we like them. Should we go out nights with them?

RAY AND DON.

Unless you have met the young men in the conventional way do not go out with them. If, however, you have been introduced and your parents approve, it would be all right to go out with them evenings.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I would like your opinion of what is the proper thing for a young man to do when he has a girl to take him out riding. Should he sit in his machine and foot the horn or come to the door and call for her?

IGNORANCE.

He should go to the door and call for her.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

TUBERCULIN AND TUBERCULIN INJECTION.

If a minute quantity of killed tubercle bacilli or of an extract made from the bodies of killed tuberculous germs be injected under the skin of a healthy child or adult no noticeable local or general effect is produced. But if the child or adult harbors anywhere in the body a focus of tuberculosis, the injection of tubercle bacilli or their extract will produce certain characteristic reactions, and these characteristic reactions are proof of the existence of the disease, tuberculosis, in the individual tested.

There are three different reactions to such tests with tubercle bacilli or their extracts. First there is the local reaction, a peculiar reddening and swelling of an area of an inch or so about the point of injection or inoculation. Next there is the local reaction, which means a temporary exaggeration or increase of the symptoms, such as pain or inflammation at the seat of the disease, wherever it may be. Finally there may occur a general reaction, consisting of an increase of fever, or, if there has been no fever present, then a rise of body temperature above normal for a few hours. Remember, none of these reactions occur in a person who has no tubercular infection; and on the other hand the occurrence of a tubercular reaction is no proof that the particular disease of which the patient complains is tuberculosis, for, of course, one may have tuberculosis and various other diseases at the same time.

Nor does a positive reaction to tuberculin indicate that the tuberculosis is active, for it is well known that a great many healthy persons harbor somewhere in the body smoldering or latent foci of tuberculosis, from infection which occurs in childhood, and although these individuals will react positively to a tuberculin test it would be absurd to say that they have tuberculosis except in the sense that nearly all of us have it potentially.

A person with active tuberculosis of a joint or of the lungs has fever (temperature above normal) at least part of the time. The fever is a general reaction to tuberculin automatically produced and thrown into the circulation from the focus of tuberculosis. It behooves such a person, therefore, to go extremely slow about any exercise of physical exertion, since exercise, even walking across the room, may amount to a dangerously large dose of tuberculin.

Tuberculin is sometimes employed as a remedy as well as for diagnostic purpose. It certainly requires an ex-

LITTLE POLLY Kembath Process BROOMS

In the old style broom where the broom fibres are wire wound on to the handle, the fibres are strained and bent into shape over the shoulders of the broom. That's why in the old style broom the fibres break at the shoulder.

In the Little Polly there is no strain on the fibres. They are specially selected, then toughened by our exclusive Kembath Process, then built up flat and held in place and securely fastened to the handle with steel clamps, protected by a cover of fibre. But that is not all. In Little Polly Brooms, the tip is full, soft and flexible instead of stubby as in the old style broom. That's why Little Polly Brooms after months of use, wear down evenly without sagging, without running to a point.

You can cut the stitching on a Little Polly and still have a serviceable, long-wearing broom. To get the difference, try this on an old style broom.

GREEN FANCY

By GEORGE BARR MCCUTCHEON Author of "Grasshopper," "The Whisper of Her Hand," "The Prince of Grasshopper," Etc.

Copyright by Dodd, Mead and Co., Inc.
The thought of that remark more than once during the course of an afternoon spent in the woods about Green Fancy.

O'Dowd virtually commanded the expedition. It was he who thought of everything. First of all, he led the party to the corner of the estate nearest the point where Paul was shot from his horse. Sitting in his saddle he called the attention of the other riders to what appeared to be a most significant fact in connection with the killing of this man.

"From what I hear the man Paul was shot through the lungs, directly from the front. The bullet went straight through his body. He was riding very rapidly down the road.
When he came to a point not far above the crossroads he was fired upon. It is safe to assume that he was looking intently ahead, trying to make out the crossing. He was not shot from the side of the road, gentlemen, but from the middle of it. The bullet came from a point almost directly in front of him, and not from Mr. Curtis' property here to the left or Mr. Conley's on the right. The chances are that Paul did not accompany Roon to the meeting place up the road. He remained near the horses.
That's how he managed to get away so quickly. It remained for the man at the crossroads to settle with him. But we're wasting time with all this tattle of mine. Let us be moving.
There is one point on which we must all agree. The deadliest marksman in the world fired those shots. No bungling on that score, behead."

In the course of time the party, traversing the ground contiguous to the public road, came within sight of the green dwelling among the trees.
Barnes' interest revived. His second view of the house increased his wonder and admiration. It O'Dowd had not actually located it among the trees for him he would have been at a loss to discover it, although it was immediately in front of him and in direct line of vision.

De Soto was seen approaching through the green sea, his head appearing and disappearing intermittently in the billows formed by the undulating underbrush. He shook hands with Barnes a moment later.
"I'm glad you had the sense to bring Mr. Barnes with you, O'Dowd," said he. "You didn't mention him when you telephoned that you were personally conducting a sightseeing party. I tried to catch you afterward on the telephone, but you had left the Tavern. Mrs. Collier wanted me to ask you to capture Mr. Barnes for dinner tonight."

"Mrs. Collier is the sister of Mr.
Curtis," explained O'Dowd. "Then he turned upon De Soto incredulously.
"For the love of Pat," he cried, "what's come over them? Why, I made so bold as to suggest last night that you were a chap worth cultivating, Barnes —and that you wouldn't be long in the neighborhood—but to say your feelings I'll not repeat what they said, the two of them. What changed them over, De Soto?"

"A chance remark of Miss Cameron's at lunch today. She wondered if Barnes could be the chap who wrote the articles about Peru and the Incas, or something of the sort, and that set them to looking up the back numbers of the Geographic Magazine in Mr.
Curtis' library. Not only did they find the articles but they found your picture. I had no difficulty in deciding that you were one and the same. The atmosphere cleared in a jiffy. It became even clearer when it was discovered that you have had a few ancestors and are received in good society—both here and abroad, as the late Frederic Townsend Martin would have said. I hereby officially present the result of subsequent deliberation. Mr.
Barnes is invited to dine with us tonight."

Barnes' heart was still pounding rapidly as he made the useful admission that he "didn't have a thing to wear." He couldn't think of accepting the gracious invitation—
"If they'll take me as I am," began Barnes, doubtfully.

"I say," called out O'Dowd to the sheriff, who was gazing longingly at the horses tethered at the bottom of the slope, "would you mind leading
Mr. Barnes' nag back to the Tavern?
He is stopping to dinner. And, while I think of it, are you satisfied, Mr.
Sheriff, with the day's work? If not you will be welcome again at any time if you'll telephone a half minute in advance." To Barnes he said: "We'll send you down in the automobile tonight, provided it has survived the day. We're expecting the poor thing to die in its tracks at almost any instant."

Ten minutes later Barnes passed through the portals of Green Fancy.

CHAPTER IX.

The first wayfarer, the Second Wayfarer and the Spirit of Chivalry Ascendant.

The wide green door, set far back in a recess not unlike a kiosk, was opened by a man servant who might easily have been mistaken for a waiter from Delmonico's or Sherry's.

"Say to Mrs. Collier, Nicholas," said
Mr. Barnes is here for dinner," said De Soto. "I will make the cocktails this evening."

Much to Barnes' surprise—and disappointment—the interior of the house failed to sustain the bewildering effect produced by the exterior. The entrance hall and the living room into which he was conducted by the two men were singularly like others that he had seen. The latter, for example, was of ordinary dimensions, furnished with a thought for comfort rather than elegance or even good taste. The couches and chairs were low and deep and comfortable, as if intended for men only, and they were covered with rich, gay materials; the hangings at the windows were of deep blue and gold; the walls an inobtrusive cream color, almost literally touched with etchings.

The stairs were thickly carpeted. At the top his guide turned to the left and led the way down a long corridor.
They passed at least four doors before O'Dowd stopped and threw open the fifth on that side of the hall. There were still two more doors beyond.

"Suggests a hotel, doesn't it?" said the Irishman, standing aside for Barnes to enter. "All of the sleeping apartments are on this floor, and the baths and boudoirs and what not. The garret is above, and that's where we deposit our family skeletons, intern our grievances, store our stock of spitefulness and hide all the little devils that must come sneaking up from the city with us whether we will or no. Dabson," addressing the man who had quietly entered the room through the door behind them, "do Mr.
Barnes, will ye, and fetch me from Mr. De Soto's room when you've finished. I leave you to Dabson's tender mercies. The saints preserve us! Look at the man's boots! Dabson, get out your brush and duster first of all. He's been floundering in a bog."
The jovial Irishman retired, leaving Barnes to be "done" by the silent, swift-moving valet. Dabson was young and vigorous and exceedingly well tripped. He made short work of "doing" the visitor; barely fifteen minutes elapsed before O'Dowd's return.

Presently they went downstairs together. Lamps had been lighted, many of them, throughout the house. A fire crackled in the cavernous fireplace at the end of the living room and grouped about its cheerful, grateful blaze were the ladies of Green Fancy.

The girl of his thoughts was there, standing slightly aloof from the others, but evidently amused by the tale

O'Dowd Virtually Commanded the Expedition.

THIN, NERVOUS FOLKS SHOULD TAKE BITRO-
PHOSPHATE

Weak, thin people—men or women—are nearly always nervous wreckers. This is usually due to a deficiency of phosphorus, which is the element responsible for the strength and vigor of the body. Bitro-Phosphate is a powerful nerve tonic and a stimulant to the appetite. It builds up the system and restores the lost strength. It is the only phosphate that can be safely taken by the weak and nervous. It is the only phosphate that builds up the system and restores the lost strength.

Women Need It to Bring Pink Glow of eigning delicate lines. Men Need It to Make Strong Vigorous Bodies and Steady Nerves.

SUPERVISORS END SPRING SESSION; MEET NEXT JUNE

Rock county's Board of Supervisors adjourned sine die yesterday afternoon after one of the liveliest sessions in a number of years. The next meeting of the board was set for June 6 at 10:30 a. m.

Three important matters featured the special meeting of the board, the county agent, the county nurse and the placing of the county's money out at interest better than previous boards have been able to secure for some time.

Efforts of the radicals to bring up the county agent matter and send it to an ignominious death were a failure the advocates of the better farming director winning 20 to 18.

There was talk about the court house just before the board went in session yesterday afternoon which pointed to a revival of the county nurse matter but this failed to be brought to the attention of the supervisors for the second time. The county nurse carried 23 to 15 the previous afternoon.

The board took a slap at Beloit when it completely ignored the line city's demands for a full-time probation officer and thereby exonerated Sheriff Fred Beley and District Attorney Stanley G. Dunwiddie of slighting the performance of the duties of their official duties.

Supervisors went on record as favoring the erection of a county tuberculosis sanatorium, should one be decided upon, at a site just as close as feasible to the main structures of the asylum and poor farm. The state committee recommended the building at Barker's Corners where the stone house stands on the Edgerton road. It was approved.

The board voted Chairman Hull compensation of fifteen dollars for signing the new cement highway bonds.

More than a day will be necessary for Mr. Hull to accomplish the task. Four thousand five hundred dollars will be added this fall to town of Rock tax rolls to cover the town's share of highway improvement.

Hugh Sweeney, George S. Fisher, and W. T. Dixon filed claims for damages alleged to have occurred as a result of accidents on highways for which the county is accountable. The claims were referred to the special committee for this purpose and will be reported back at the next meeting.

The board gave county officials and their deputies opportunities to have Saturday afternoons off during the months of June, July and August when it declared for the closing of offices on these afternoons.

J. M. Nelson, veteran custodian of the county building was awarded a full month's vacation with pay this summer.

Chairman Hull yesterday announced the standing committees for 1913. They are as follows:

Tax certificates and illegal taxes—J. A. Peterson, Van Ness Green, Joseph Ross.

District Attorney's Report—F. A. Finch, L. S. Patterson, Wilson Lane.

Application for Relief of Blind and Insane—Nels Benson, Robt. Snyder, Dan Drew.

Farmers to Save $1,500,000 by New U. S. Nitrate Rule

Washington, April 18.—More than $1,500,000 will be saved by the farmers this year as a result of the adoption of the new government nitrate rule of the department in making available at reduced prices large quantities of nitrate for fertilizer.

After the armistice was signed the department released to the war department a quantity of 111,000 tons of nitrate produced during the war for use in explosives. To this is added forty thousands tons received from Chile too late for distribution last year.

Under authority of the food control commission the nitrate is to be sold at cost, says a statement today from the department. Farmers have taken up the full 131,000 tons in orders ranging from 200 pounds to 300 tons.

U. S. Finds it Hard to Get Men to Work on Farms

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Washington, April 18.—Despite the surplus of labor reported in many sections efforts of the United States employment service to secure men for work on the farms has met with little success. Says a statement made public today by the department of labor.

The statement says telegraphic reports from 59 cities indicate an improvement in unemployment conditions.

Reports from these cities show 26 having a surplus of labor in representative industries aggregating 37,900 as compared to a surplus over the previous week of 323,605. Seven cities show a shortage aggregating 3,750, or $60 less than the previous week, while 16 show an equality of labor supply and demand. Of the 23 cities reported, surplus is noticeable, says the statement, that 14 showed decreases and none show a material increase.

U. S. Board Has 151 Vessels Carrying Food

Washington, April 18.—The United States shipping board announced today that it has 151 steamers representing 950,000 deadweight tonnage engaged in carrying food to the starving nations of Europe. Originally designed as a weapon to defeat Germany's submarine campaign, says a statement, the ships are now serving as a great "mercy fleet" feeding friend and foe alike.

DAVID V. BINKLEY, of Alabama, Co. I, 168th Inf., 42d Division. Private David V. Binkley sought and obtained permission to go out alone in front of our lines and recover his corporal, who was lying severely wounded in the open. Across an area that was swept by enemy machine guns for more than fifty yards went "Grin Binkley." While the enemy fire was directed at him he reached his corporal, picked him up and carried him in his arms safely back into our lines. He was wounded but refused to go to the aid station and remained in action until his company had won its objective. His citation for the Distinguished Service Cross reads: "For extraordinary heroism in action at Hill 212 near Serzy, northeast of Chateau-Thierry, July 26." He is a sergeant now and a mighty good one. (Copyright, 1919.)

STRIKERS PROBE BURLESON'S PLAN

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Boston, Mass., April 18.—Leaders of the striking telephone workers called today regarding Postmaster General Burleson's plan for breaking the deadlock that has arisen in connection with their demands for wage increases and the privileges of collective bargaining. Mr. Burleson yesterday took the initiative and submitted the demands to the general manager of the company, William H. Driver, Jr., with the understanding they would discuss their case with the general manager and that final action on his recommendations would be taken by the postoffice department on or before May 15.

LAUNCH "AIR BUS" SERVICE TO ITALY

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Prague, Bohemia, April 18.—From the flying grounds of Prosek, near here, a regular service of "air buses" will be started soon to Italy, via Vienna, a distance of 225 miles. Trial flights already have taken place, the duration of the trip being four hours 15 minutes. The machines will be Italian airplanes with motors developing two thousand horse power and carrying 47 passengers.

Train Traps Taxi Driver.
Fond du Lac, Wis.—While hurrying to beat the train across a railroad crossing, a taxi driver drove his car right onto the arm of the gate. The accident happened late at night and the driver had two passengers in the car. The long arm of the gate drove through the windshield and passing the driver's head, went out through the rear window, impaling the car. The two occupants in the back seat, ducked when they saw the giant sword coming toward them and escaped injury.

Tales of the Friendly Forest

Now, before I tell you what Uncle Lucky did with the lollypops, I must tell you who was at the picnic, for you remember we left off in the last story just when Robbie Redbreast was showing dear Uncle Lucky the way through the shady wood.

Of course, Billy Bunny was there, and so was his mother, and Old Mother Magpie and Mrs. Squirrel Nutcracker. So was the postmistress, the old grasshopper who once upon a time gave Billy Bunny a letter from his circus elephant friend.

Besides all these older people there were Dickey Meadowmouse and Timmy Chipmunk, Tommy Turtle and Squiggle Nickeracker's two sons, Shadow Tail and Scatterbrain. And old Peter Possum, with Mrs. Possum and the little possums. Old Tomboy the Owl, who had on a pair of smoked glasses, and a half of lollypops out from under the back seat, Robbie Redbreast began to sing:

"Three cheers for Uncle Lucky, he's got some things for you that look like candy balls on sticks. But you'll know what to do With them, so now my song I'll stop. Three cheers for Uncle Lucky, and every lolly pop."

Well, after that, every little four-footed friend of Uncle Lucky had a lollypop, and so did the lollypop, and the lollypop, and when the folk up in over, Uncle Lucky took Mrs. Bunny home to the Old Briar Patch, and then he and Billy Bunny went for a drive in the Luckymobile. And after a while, not so very long, they came to a little grasshopper who was playing a tune on his left hind leg. And if you don't know how his did it, I'll tell you. He rubbed his wing up and down just like a now on a fiddlestick. That's how he did it.

"I feel just like dancing," said Uncle Lucky, and he hopped out of the Luckymobile and began to hop around to the tune of "Over There." And while he kept on dancing, all of a sudden, up came the yellow dog tramp all out breath, for he had been running as fast as he could. "Quick!" he shouted, "there's a mad bull coming this way!" And in less time than I can take to tell it to you, they all jumped into the Luckymobile, even the fiddler grasshopper, and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

"The curved line," remarked the Dot Drawing teacher, "is a decided improvement on straight lines, and is supposed to give a certain grace to a drawing. If you can't draw a curve free hand, it is permissible to use a pair of compasses. Now, Freddy, what do you think could be done with the curved line that appears on the board?"

Record Cherry Crop.

Sturgeon Bay.—The cherry crop of the Door county peninsula promises this year to be of the greatest possible value to the various companies operating in this region. Last year was one of the poorest years on record, yet the coming year will be much more profitable and many hundred of pickers will have to be secured for the summer crop. Last year the crop was shipped out in express cars. The coming year it will be solid trains of fruit, if the early season prospects are not followed by unfavorable conditions. One of the biggest enterprises in the region is that of a group of Milwaukee people, chiefly school teachers, who have formed a co-operative company, with comparatively small investment. They will, if the last two or three years of prosperity continue, have paid for their entire holdings in less than five years.

Here's a Real Coup.

Appleton.—Poking sickness, Joseph Ludrow, awaiting trial on a minor charge, was sent to the city home hospital ward at St. Elizabeth's hospital, which was crowded. His clothes were hidden when he was put to bed, but he found them and disappeared. He pretended to have lockjaw, and had written the sheriff that he could open his jaws or talk, and the sheriff believed him.

Arrival of U. S. Troops Saved Day For the British, Says Mrs. Ward

By MRS. HUMPHRY WARD.

THANK for instance what we have been accustomed to call the "March retreat" of last year. The dispatch of Sir Douglas Haig describing the actions of March and April last year was so headed in the "Times," though nothing of the kind appears in official publications. And we can remember in England the gnawing anxiety of every day and every hour, from March 21 up to the end of April, when the German offensive had beaten itself out, on the British front at least, and the crushing odds of the British reinforcements, together with the rapid incoming of the American troops, had given the British army the breathing space, of which three months later it made the use we know.

"But why," asks one of the men best qualified to speak in our army, "why use the words 'retreat' and 'disaster' at all?" They were indeed commonly used at the time both in England and abroad, and have been often used since about the fighting of the British army last March and April. Strictly speaking, neither word is applicable. The British army indeed withdrew some thirty-five miles on its southern front, till the German attack was finally stayed before Amiens.

ALLIES' HOUR OF TRIAL.

The British center stood firm before Amiens; but in the north we had to yield almost all the ground gained in the salient the year before, and some that had never yet been in German hands. We lost heavily in men and guns, and a shudder of alarm ran through all the allied countries.

But what Europe was then witnessing—

I am, of course, quoting not any opinion of my own, to which I have no right, but what I have gathered from those responsible and who were in the forefront of the fighting—was in truth a great defensive battle, long and anxiously foreseen, in which German forces were double the British forces, opposed to them (sixty-two to thirty-two divisions, seventy-three to thirty-two, and so on) while none the less all that was vitally necessary to the allied cause was finally achieved by the British army, against these huge odds.

Germany, in fact, made her last desperate effort a year ago to break through the beleaguering British forces, and failed. On our side there was a great surprise. The troops themselves may have been confident; it is the habit of gallant men. But the British command knew what it was doing, and had carefully considered where ground could be given—and in all probability it would have to be given—with the least disadvantage.

SOME ELEMENTS OF CHANCE.

Some accidents, if one may call them so, indeed there were—the thick, white fog which, on the morning of March 21, enveloped the front line, and made it impossible to see more than fifty yards in any direction, so that the "machine guns and forward field guns which had been disposed so as to defend this zone with their own fire were robbed almost entirely of their effect," and the masses of German infantry, advanced comparatively unhindered, and so closely supporting each other, that "loss of direction was impossible." Hence the rapidity of the German advance through the front lines on March 21, and the alarming break through south of St. Quentin, where our recently extended line was weakened and newest.

A second incident was the drying up of the Reims marshes at a time when in a normal year they might have been reckoned on to stop the enemy's advance. A third piece of luck was the fact that in the new section of the British line, where the enemy track broke at its hottest, there had been so little, since the French—who had held it tightly as a quiet sector during the winter—gave it over to us, to strengthen its defenses, and to do the endless digging, the railway construction and the repair of roads, which might have made a very great difference.

THE CROWNING MISFORTUNE.

And finally there was the most unfortunate accident of all—the break through the Portuguese line at Richebourg St. Vaast, just as the third division holding it was about to be relieved. Of that accident, as we have seen, the enemy, hungry for the channel ports, made his very worst and most, till the French and British fought him to a final stand before Floghtbroeck and Ypres.

For while the strategic insight of Marshal Foch, who assumed complete control of the allied armies in France and Belgium on March 26, combined with the experienced and capable leadership of the British commander-in-chief, refused to dissipate the French reserves, so important to the allies when the British armies had brought the huge attack to a standstill—which for the center and south of our line had been already attained ten days after the storm, broke—and knew the worst that had happened, could happen to them, when the weeks passed and the offensive ceased; when all the gaps in our ranks were filled by the rush of reinforcements from home, and the American army poured steadily across the Atlantic, the tension and peril of the spring passed steadily into the confident strength and expectation of the summer. The British army had held against an attack which could never be repeated, and the future was with the allies.

The losses of the great moment had to be taken, and both the French and British commanders had complete faith in the capacity of the British army to meet them. And when all is said, when our grave losses in prisoners and guns are fully admitted, and the question is asked, "What was the result?" The answer is: "The German had failed to gain either of their real objectives—either the channel ports or the division of the British armies from the French. They had won themselves out against a lone foe which recoiled indeed, but never broke, and was all the time filling up and strengthening from behind."

GERMAN POWER BROKEN.

The losses inflicted on their immense reserves reacted on all the subsequent fighting of the year, both on the Aisne and the Marne.

Let us remember that at no time in our fighting withdrawal, either on the Somme or the Aisne, was there "anything approaching a breakdown of command or a failure in morale." On the other hand, all over the battlefield in every part of the "waiting game" which for a time the British armies were called to play, men did the most impressive and heroic things.

Gun detachments held their posts till every man was killed or wounded; infantry who had had neither rest nor sleep for days together, fought "back to back" in the trenches, shooting both to front and rear. Occasional confusion, even panic, occasional loss of communication and misunderstanding of orders, occasional incompetence and stupidity, there must be in such a vast backward sweep of battle; but skill, purpose, superb bravery were never lacking in any portion of the field, and the German communications, exultantly announcing the total defeat of the British army, may be compared, as a matter of fact, with the reports from German headquarters just before the first battle of the Marne.

So the defeat of the English is complete, said the German high command in the latter days of August, 1914. "The English army is retreating in the most complete disorder." The British have been completely defeated to the north of St. Quentin, and so on. And yet a week later, as General Maurice, with much fresh evidence, has lately shown, the army which was thus declared of no paper had rejoicingly turned upon von Kluck and was playing a vital part in the great victory of the Marne.

PRELUDE TO VICTORY.

So the spring of 1918, with its withdrawal of vast defensive army, coupled with the stubborn and tenacious hold of the British army, were the inevitable and heroic prelude to the victorious repulse of August and the final battles of the war. Inevitable, because no forethought or exertion on the British side could have averted the German onslaught, determined as it was, by the breakdown of the whole eastern front of the war, and the letting loose upon the western front of immense forces—forces which were released against us week by week after the Russian debacle, till in March the balance of numbers which was almost even in January, had risen on the German side to a superiority of 150,000 bayonets.

The dispatch of divisions to Italy, the recall of men to the shipyards and the mines to meet the submarine danger, the heavy fighting in the salient and at Cambrai, the latter half of 1917, the lack of time for training new levies, owing to our depleted contributions to sharpen the peril in which England stood. But it is in such straits as these that our race shows its quality.

And in this fighting, for the first time in British history, and in the history of Europe, Americans stood side by side in battle with British and French.

In the battles of March and April, says Sir Douglas Haig, "American and British troops fought shoulder to shoulder in the same trenches, and have shared together in the satisfaction of beating off German attacks. All ranks of the British army look forward to the day when the rapidly growing strength of the American army will allow American and British soldiers to co-operate in offensive action."

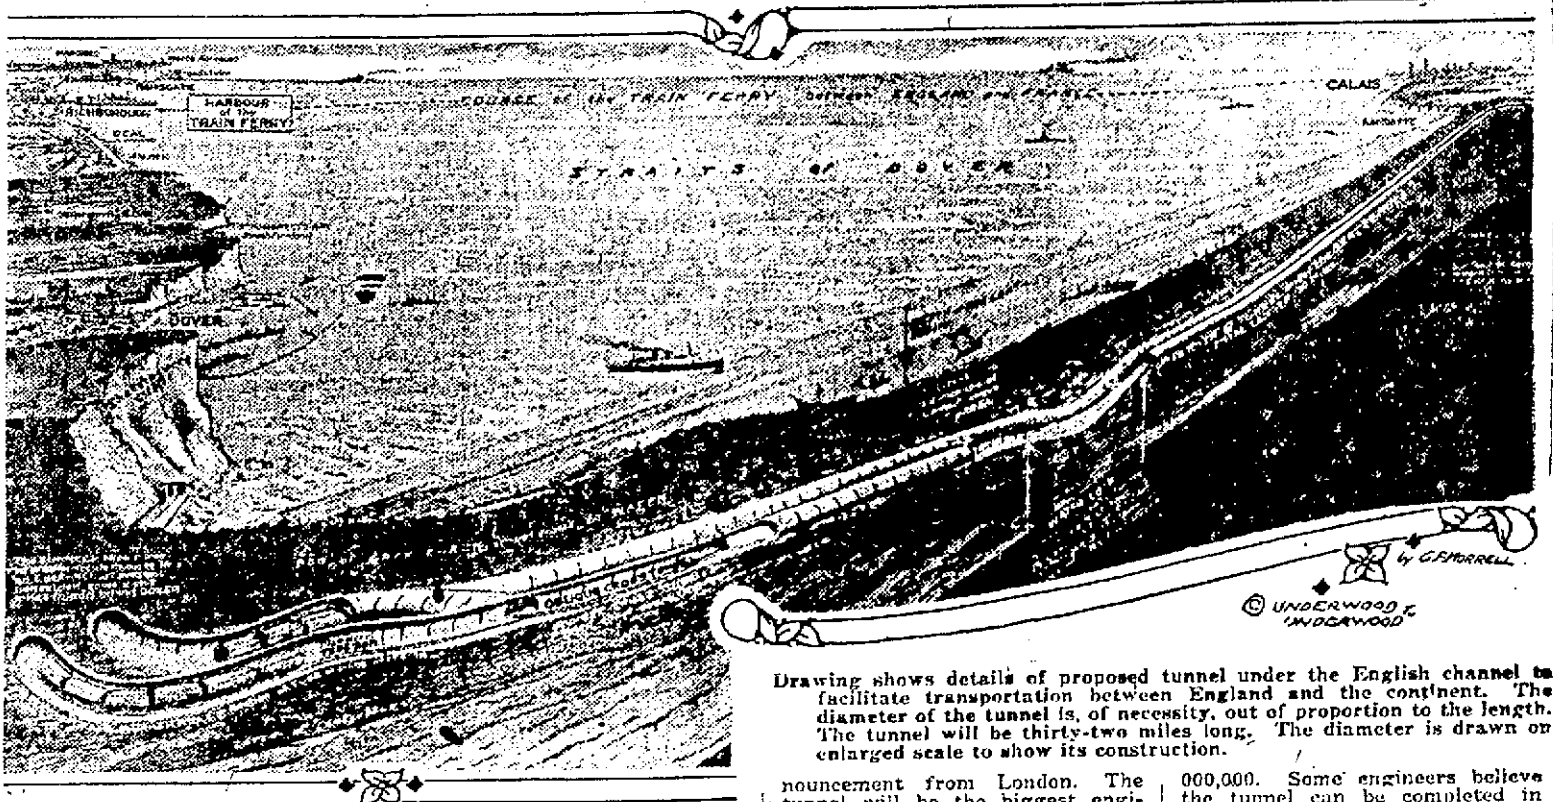

That day came without much delay. It carried the British army to Mons and the young American army to Sedan.

TUNNEL UNDER ENGLISH CHANNEL FROM DOVER TO CALAIS TO BE STARTED SOON

Drawing shows details of proposed tunnel under the English channel to facilitate transportation between England and the continent. The diameter of the tunnel is, of necessity, out of proportion to the length. The tunnel will be thirty-two miles long. The diameter is drawn on enlarged scale to show its construction.

Announcement from London. The tunnel will be the biggest engineering enterprise of modern times, with the exception of the Panama canal. The cost, estimated roughly, will be about $100,000,000. Some engineers believe the tunnel can be completed in five and one-half years. It will be thirty-two miles long, including approaches. Twenty-one and one-half miles of it will be under sea.

The long talked of tunnel under the English channel from Dover to Calais, to facilitate transportation between England and France and the rest of the continent will be started soon, according to an an-

Perfect Protection Against Germ Disease Epidemics

Make No Mistake. Be Careful in the Selection of Your Germicidal Antiseptic.

There is Death to Mankind in the Use of Commonly Known Antiseptics. These Are Poisons.

There is danger of disease through misplaced confidence in the weak "near antiseptics." In these "near antiseptics" the people who use them are depending upon a broken reed. It is surely a cruel injustice to offer a well-meaning mother of a family, a pretended remedy to be used in guarding the lives of her children against the fury of virulent disease germs.

Benetol

It Has No Competitor. There Is No Substitute.

The health departments of our leading cities are advising the people to use an antiseptic for gargling the throat to remove disease germs which are flying through the air, and are depending upon a broken reed. It is surely a cruel injustice to offer a well-meaning mother of a family, a pretended remedy to be used in guarding the lives of her children against the fury of virulent disease germs.

Hence Make No Mistake in the Choice of Your Antiseptics

Use Benetol as directed for a throat gargle, and a nasal douche. Drink it several times daily because it is the only powerful non-poisonous germicidal antiseptic that may be so used in any strenuous necessity to kill disease germs.

Benetol is Simple to Use

Ten to twenty drops in a glass of hot water may be drunk in a five minute daily. It may be used as a throat gargle, mouth wash, nasal douche, and for washing infected eyes and diseased skin. It is the best remedy for diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough, and all other diseases of the throat, nose, and lungs.

Becomes Greater By Comparison

The medicinal value of Benetol as a germicidal antiseptic is its greatest feature when comparison is made with the poisonous antiseptics, such as carbolic acid, bichloride of mercury, etc., or with the weak "near antiseptics" which claim germicidal power, such as peroxide and many heavily advertised mouth washes. The powerful antiseptics must be so highly diluted that their germicidal power is reduced to a very small fraction. Like an army of ten thousand men, which alone thousand are hundred are tied up in accounts for many of the prevailing epidemics. Benetol, because the full germ-killing power of the poisonous agents cannot be used, and again, the weaker the antiseptic, which may be used in full power or in high percentages, have practically no germ-killing value. Benetol, because of its special character permits the use of full strength when necessary, hence Benetol's stupendous available germ killing activity.

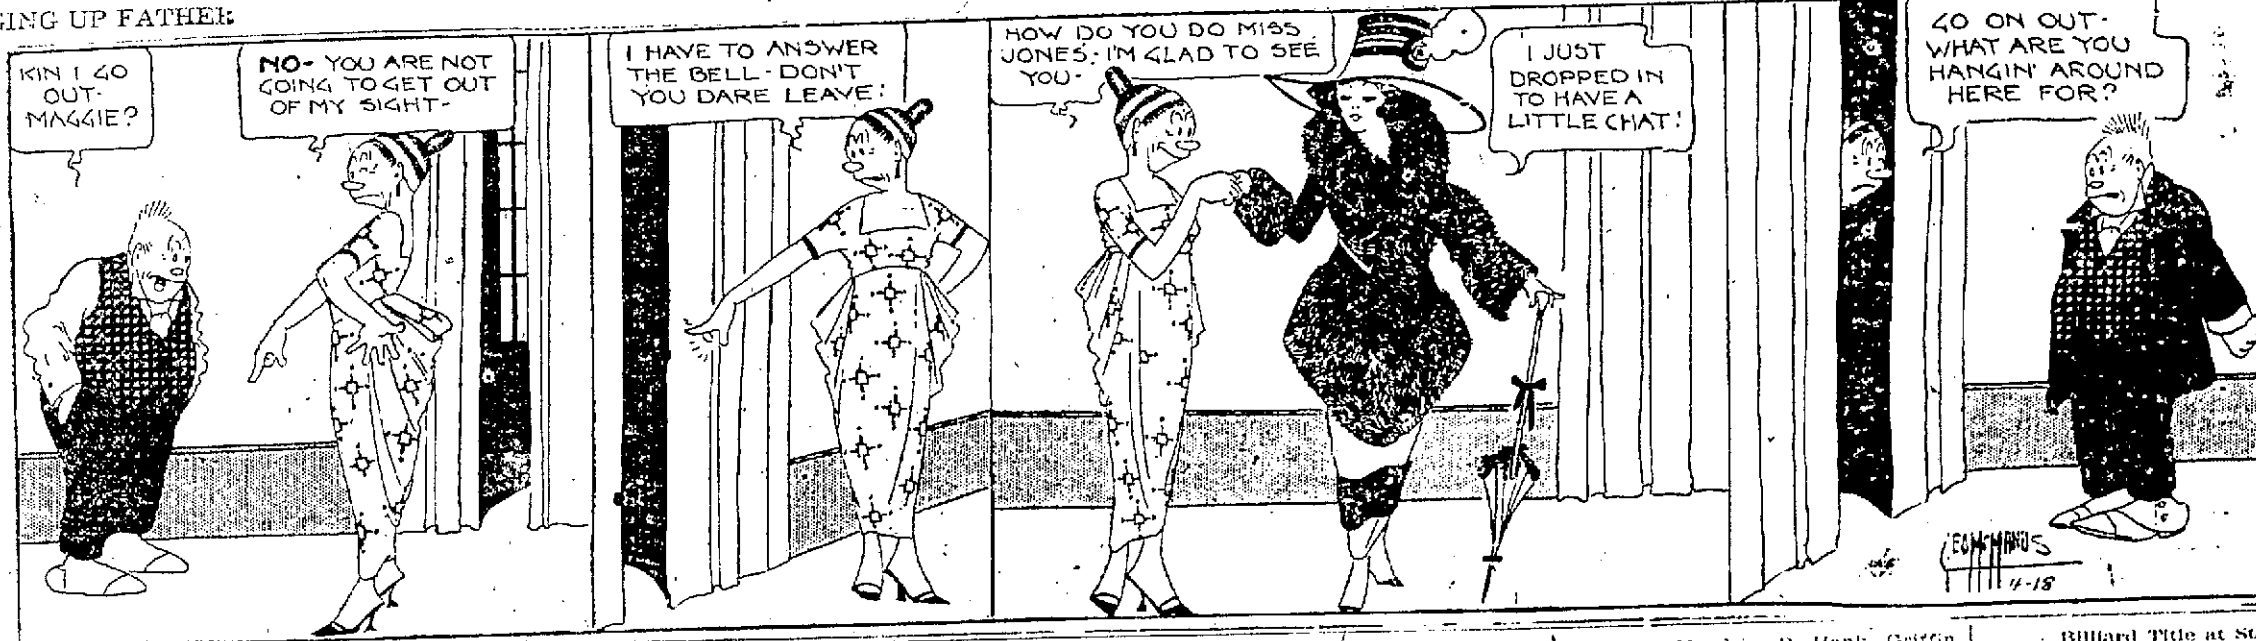

Protect Your Home Against Prevalent Epidemic Germ Diseases

Secure a 50c bottle of Benetol at once and use it as directed. You will find it more effective in actual home use for any purpose than were the old poisons or "near antiseptics." It averts the danger of losing a member of the family to diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough, and all other diseases of the throat, nose, and lungs. Benetol prevents sickness and saves lives every day. All our claims for Benetol are amply easily proven. Your first test is in red cartons by all good drug stores.
